Verification of Certification Activities in West African Cocoa Sector. Final Verification Report: Côte d'Ivoire

Executive summary page iii, second paragraph under 'Sampling design':

'One major limitation of the study was that only working children were included in the sample, making it impossible to measure the proportion of children who were engaged in cocoa production activities.'

Page 35, first paragraph under 'Listing and definition of units':

'The list of households was constructed so that it only consisted of households that produced cocoa. However, the children that were included in the sample were only the working children. This is a major limitation of the definition of units of study since it excluded children who were not working and no estimate can be made regarding the percentage of children who are working in cocoa and that of child labor in the cocoa sector. Moreover, the definition of involvement in cocoa production was not clear in terms of characterizing a working child.'
